

I urge you not to weaken the Do Not Call legislation. Since my solicitation calls have been reduced, family life is far less interrupted as well as my work time at home. While solicitors have a right to conduct business they do not have the right to interrupt and invade our lives at will. There are plenty of opportunities via email and regular mail for consumers to be contacted. These means are less invasive and allow those interested to pursue their interest should they choose to.